Before table

These are good for showing differences in proportion (especially percentages). Ideally the differences should be large as small differences are hard to see. They enable you to show all of the percentages that make up a whole.

After table.